18th Oct 10.30am Koinonia: Stanley Matchett is an award winning photographer who has been at the pinnacle of his profession in NI for more than 60 years. During an outstanding career with the Belfast Telegraph he photographed royalty, presidents, prime ministers and hundreds of celebrities including the Beatles. His iconic image from Bloody Sunday of the then Father Daly waving his bloodstained handkerchief is probably the best-known picture of that day. His portfolio covers more than half a century of life in NI and reflects the major social, economic and political changes we have experienced. All welcome.
- Saturday*
